Gutted you can't make Birmingham later this year but fully understand you've got a job to do! Hopefully catch you in the UK sometime in the future 😞

Me too. We're working on getting me there for another con though, so all is good. :)

Great news! You better return for another Terrifier film also 😞 Damien Leone needs to get his arse into gear 😂

Oh we intend on it. Damien is writing it as we speak. ;)

Art uses various weapons throughout the film including a gun, cleaver, scalpel, cat o' nine tails whip, knife, hacksaw, carving knife, and some others. Art is seen completely drenched in blood at some points in the film. The protagonists fight back by stabbing Art in the foot, back, face, punching and kicking him, and hitting him with a wooden plank several times. Mild blood. Art kills his victims through mutilation. Nearly every death in the movie is insanely gory, and not at all for those with a weak stomach. The Parents Guide items below may give away important plot points. Art the Clown wears one of his victim's chopped off bare breasts. Dawn's breasts and the side of her buttocks are shown during the hacksaw scene, but there is no full frontal nudity. A female character is hung topless upside down, wearing only panties. She is sawed in half vertically, crotch first. Art also wears a woman's breast after cutting them off, similar to Buffalo bills suit from silence of the lambs. 2 characters are seen caressing each other and rolling around in a bed in the background for 10-15 seconds. This is all of the sexual content in this movie other than mild jokes/dialogue. Monica's eyes are graphically gouged out. It is onscreen and very brutal and gross and hard to watch. Her bloody face is later seen with an eyeball popped out. Very graphic, Tons of blood squirts out of her eyes when this happens Steve is decapitated offscreen. His head is later shown on a table, with a Jack-o-Lantern face carved into it with and candles gouged in the eyes. Art stabs Tara's leg several times as she tries to escape. Art the Clown scalps the cat lady and chops off her breasts offscreen. The woman's corpse is seen later on in excruciating detail. Art then wears the woman's scalp and breasts. Believing Tara's sister to be dead, Art proceeds to eat her face. It is onscreen, but not too graphic (at least compared to other scenes). Slightly comedic Mike is stomped in the head multiple times by Art the Clown. He then squashes his face with a fumigation tank and his clown shoes, and his head bursts into bloody chunks. Very graphic and gory Art stabs Will in top of his head, with thick blood oozing out. He then takes a second knife and saws into his neck, and tears it open. We see blood spewing, gore, and the bone in his neck. Art then tears his head off entirely and kicks it away. Tara is shot a bunch of times in the head onscreen, with reservoirs of blood spewing out. Her corpse is later shown with a mangled face. Art suddenly pops out of a body bag and strangles the Coroner to death, to the point where his eyes start to bleed. Art commits suicide by shooting himself through the mouth. Lots of blood, but he survives (somehow). Ramone's fingers are chopped off with a cleaver, with blood spurting. Art then takes a carving knife and stabs him in the cheek, before pushing him to the ground and stabbing him in the face over and over again and also putting tongs in his eyes. His corpse is later shown with a completely maimed face, that doesn't even look human. In the film's most infamous scene, Tara is tied down and gagged. Art the Clown reveals Dawn to be hanging upside down wearing only panties. Art rips the panties off and uses a hacksaw between her legs, violently cutting down until he reaches her head while Tara is forced to watch Dawn be split in half right in front of her. The entire scene is onscreen, and is indescribably graphic, with a couple of shockingly explicit camera shots. Even her insides fall out at one point! Later, he takes a selfie with her sawed in half corpse. Later on, Art the Clown takes a selfie with Dawn's mutilated dead body that is completely red with blood at this point. A woman is repeatedly hit with a cat o' nine tails like device with blades on the ends. Blood is shown. A woman is hit with a truck. No blood, and she survives. Art injects an unknown chemical via syringe into Tara's neck to knock her out. The fear of clowns is called coulrophobia. It's such a common fear because clowns can be hard to read. Their genuine facial expressions are covered up by layers of thick makeup. They could be frowning when their painted face is smiling. They could be angry when they look cheerful. Although they are meant to come across as silly and child-friendly, their outrageous makeup and attire can actually make them appear threatening. The uncanny valley also plays a role in our fear of clowns. The uncanny valley suggests that when something comes close to mimicking a human without fully looking human, it can cause discomfort. This is why clowns, like zombies and dolls, are so off-putting to some people. They look human - but they don't look human enough. There is something different about them that makes them feel unpredictable, and maybe even unsafe. Many of us were introduced to coulrophobia through the "Zeebo the Clown" episodes of Are You Afraid of the Dark? Of course, famous films have contrived the fear of clowns. As early as the 1970s and 1980s, films have portrayed clowns as serial killers and evil spirits. There were also real-life murderers, like John Wayne Gacy, who posed as clowns. This has encouraged audiences to be careful about who they trust. It has pushed them to be wary around clowns. With this in mind, here are some of the scariest clown movies ever created: Poltergeist (1982) This famous film, written by Steven Spielberg, is about a house haunted by demonic ghosts. Spielberg wrote the script based off his own fear of clowns and a tree outside his house. During the famous clown scene when Robbie is strangled, the young boy playing him complained he couldn't breathe. Spielberg thought this was improvisation until he realized the boy was turning purple and rushed to remove the clown arms from him. This clown puppet is now on display at Planet Hollywood in Las Vegas. Blood Harvest (1987) The film's script was written in three weeks, and shot in less than 48 hours. This horror film is about a woman who returns home from college to find her home vandalized and her parents nowhere to be seen. Her friends end up disappearing next, and she has to try her best to protect herself. Tiny Tim, who is the star of this film, wore his own clown suit for the role. Although the script was only written in three weeks, it was filmed in even less time. It only took a single day and night to complete. Killer Klowns From Outer Space (1988) Director Stephen Chiodo shot this film on a budget of $2 million. This hilarious cult classic film is about aliens who look like clowns. When they terrorize a small town, a group of young people are forced to take action because the adults aren't taking the clowns seriously. Although this film had a two-million-dollar budget, the clowns were created at very little cost. Originally, the film didn't do well in theaters, but it has made plenty of revenue in action figures, t-shirts, and DVDs over time. Overall, it's a fun, cheesy movie with a bunch of memorable one-liners. Clownhouse (1989) This movie rightfully dropped off the face of the earth when it was revealed that the director was convicted of sexually abusing the film's 12-year old star actor during filming. This film, which was written and directed by Victor Salva, takes place right before Halloween. It follows three brothers who are terrorized by escaped mental patients who have stolen the identities of circus clowns. Although it was considered a good slasher film, it lost popularity due to the horrible crimes Victor Salva committed during filming. Fun fact: the movie was made with a $250,000 loan famed director Francis Ford Coppola gave Victor Salva and it was filmed at his Napa valley home. It (1990) This famous mini-series is about an entity who sometimes takes the form of Pennywise the Dancing Clown and murders innocent children. One of the most famous scary clowns of all time comes from the 1992 miniseries it, an adaptation of the Stephen King novel by the same name. Tim Curry played Pennywise the Clown, and he was so convincing in the role that his co-stars actively avoided him during filming. However, originally Curry was reluctant to accept the role because he didn't want to spend hours in makeup every morning. Gacy (2003) Clive Saunders served as writer and director on this biography horror film. This is a true crime drama about John Wayne Gacy, a real killer clown. He was a seemingly devoted man with a wife and children. However, it turned out he also had over thirty dead men and boys in the crawl space under his house. Gacy was nicknamed The Killer Clown because he regularly performed at children's hospitals. However, back then he called himself Patches the Clown or Pogo the Clown. House of 1000 Corpses (2003) Howdy Folks! You like blood? Violence? Freaks of nature? Well then, come on down to Captain Spaulding's Museum of Monsters and Mad-Men. See the Alligator Boy, ride my famous Murder Ride. Most of all, don't forget to take home some of my tasty fried chicken! Ha ha! It just tastes so damn good! This film, written and directed by Rob Zombie, is about two young couples traveling through Texas. During their trip, they end up as prisoners of a satanic family of serial killers. Although the movie was released in 2003, it was actually filmed in 2000. Universal Pictures, who was originally set to produce the film, refused to release it because they thought it would receive an NC-17 rating. However, the original script was much bloodier with even more gore. Fraternity Massacre At Hell Island (2007) This resort vacation horror was shot with a budget of $45 thousand on Mud Island, Tennessee. A maniacal clown haunts a resort vacation in this cheesy movie. Here is how one reviewer on Amazon eviscerated this movie that it is so bad it is good: "Stupid and boring. For one thing all these actors are way over college age...and look it. For another the acting is abysmal. There's not one good acting job here. The script is hopeless- full of bad jokes and terrible dialogue. The killings are largely bloodless and not even remotely scary." Amusement (2008) John Simpson directed this crime horror film shot in Thailand. This film is about a psychopathic stalker known as The Laugh. He goes after girls who picked on him during childhood. Although the film was never released in theaters, it stars several famous faces. The main characters are played by Keir O'Donnell, Kathryn Winnick, Laura Breckinridge, and Jessica Lucas. Each of these actors went on to appear on CSI: Crime Scene Investigation (2000-2015). The Last Circus (2010) Original title: Balada triste de trompeta This film can be considered a comedy, a drama, and a horror. It takes place in 1937 in the middle of the Spanish Civil War. It follows a young trapeze artist who is forced to choose between Sergio, the Happy Clown and Javier, the Sad Clown. However, both of these clowns are deeply disturbed. It is the perfect film for fans of Quentin Tarantino, who is a fan of the film himself. Scary or Die (2012) The five interwoven stories in this anthology were written and directed by Bob Badway and Michael Emanuel. This anthology is rated R for bloody horror violence, language, and brief sexuality. The most memorable story is about a flesh-eating clown who is trying to protect someone important to him. Another gory segment is about a cop and a vengeful Necromancer. Although each story is short, a lot happens in a short amount of time. Stitches (2012) Horror fans will probably notice that Tom takes Hypnocil in this film, which is the same medication used in Nightmare on Elm Street (1984). This hilarious horror movie is about a clown who comes back from the dead. He haunts everyone who helped take his life during an incident at a party. Daniel Radcliffe was originally offered the role of Tom in this film. However, he turned it down and Tommy Knight ended up taking the part. Horror fans will probably notice that Tom takes Hypnocil in this film, which is the same medication used in Nightmare on Elm Street (1984). All Hallow's Eve (2013) Mike Giannelli plays Art the Clown here, but he is played by David Howard Thornton in Terrifier (2016). A sort of prequel to Terrifier this anthology film was the first appearance of Art the Clown. A babysitter finds an unmarked VHS tape containing different disturbing videos of a homicidal clown. As she watches, she begins to realize that the clown is actually stalking her in real life. Clown (2014) Check out this trailer where a demonic clown takes over the body of a once loving father. This terrifying film is based on a short film by the same name. It's about a father who finds a clown suit for his son's birthday party. However, once he puts it on, he realizes it's cursed. This film was rated R for horror violence and gore. In Italy, even the movie posters featuring the clown were considered too scary and had to be censored. 31 (2016) Director Rob Zombie considers this to be the "most brutal film" he's made. This terrifying thriller is set on Halloween. It's about a group of carnival workers who are held hostage and forced to participate in a game against sadistic clowns. Rob Zombie, who is the director and writer, actually crowdfunded this film. It only took him twenty days to shoot, but it was re-edited twice before being changed from an NC-17 rating to an R rating. Terrifier (2016) David Howard Thornton stars as Art the Clown. Terrifier's premise is simple: a scary clown stalks two women on Halloween night. There's just something about this clown's looks and mannerisms that manage to make this scary for the entire film. A sequel is scheduled for some time in 2022. It (2017) Based on the mini-series about the same name, this film follows a group of children who must fight a monster disguised as a clown. Although the threat of the clown is present throughout the entire movie, Pennywise only has four minutes of dialogue in the film. The man playing him, Bill Skarsgard, was able to accomplish a lot with his facial expressions alone. However, he was extra polite and friendly in between takes. He wanted to make sure he wasn't upsetting the child actors too much. It Chapter Two (2019) Star Jessica Chastain was the first actor to be cast in this fantasy horror. This sequel takes place twenty-seven years after the children's first encounter with Pennywise. Although most of the children have moved away, they return to their hometown after receiving a disturbing phone call. Bill Skarsgard, who plays Pennywise, delivers an unforgettable performance. He can actually move his eyes in two different directions. It's one of the many quirks that makes his character so terrifying. Even Skarsgard himself had nightmares about the clown after filming. He dreamed that he had to fight the monster, just like the characters in the movie do. Clown Doll (2019) The evil doll genre blends with the clown genre in this low budget and obscure film. If you like scary doll movies, Clown Doll is for you and a perfect hybrid of evil doll and evil clown. It's also a serial killer doll, so you know there you have it. Joker (2019) Joaquin Phoenix lost about 52 pounds for his role as the Joker in this Oscar-winning horror. Of all the clown flicks, director Todd Phillips has made the most realistic, political, and highest-grossing R-rated box office movie ever. The portrayal of clowns in this narrative is one of the most depressing and thought-provoking of all stories in this list. This is a serial killer, a political signal and completely crazy. One of the most famous scenes in Hollywood cinema, and definitely clown history, is when the joker is dancing clown moves in this one. Wrinkles the Clown (2019) Watch this one if you want to be tantalized by the thought of real clowns that are murderous. Looking to learn more about real-life horrifying clowns? This documentary tells the story of one such crazy clown. While many of the reviews of this movie on Amazon are negative, it's actually a quite good movie, as explained by a defender of the film: "Ignore the emotionally driven infantile comments about how some thought "Wrinkles" was a movie.This is an entertaining docu-drama about a local scary Floridian clown who cleverly and cunningly drove the internet, media, and public insane with intrigue and self-induced paranoia.See for yourself and know "Wrinkles the Clown" is an eye-opening account of a fascination with an obsessive-hysteria of an IMAGINED psychotic-clown hired to prank and correct disobedient problematic children." More Scary Clown Horror Movies Scene from Killer Clown (2012) directed by John Lechago. The concept of scary, bloodthirsty clowns has been around for decades. The movies above are only a small sample of what exists in cinema. They are some of the most well-known films - but that doesn't mean they are the only ones worth watching. There are plenty of other options. Here are a few more scary clown movies that are bound to give you nightmares. The Clown Murders (1976) is about a group of men who kidnap an old girlfriend on Halloween as a prank. However, a real clown ends up stalking them, seeking revenge.Funland (1987) is about a clown mascot who gets revenge over losing his job at an amusement park. It was filmed at Six Flags in Atlanta.Carnival of Souls (1998) is about a young girl who witnesses a clown rape and murder her mother. As an adult, the carnival comes back to town and gives her nightmares.The Clown at Midnight (1999) is about a group of teenagers who are stalked by a clown while refurbishing an opera house.Killjoy (2000) is about three children who encounter an evil clown.We All Scream For Ice Cream (2007) is about a group of children who pranked their ice cream driver and accidentally murdered him. As adults, the man comes back as a bloodthirsty spirit.100 Tears (2007) is about a lonely circus performer who is searching for revenge.Secrets of The Clown (2007) is about a man who lost his best friend to a brutal murder and is haunted by a disturbing presence.Zombieland (2009) this Hollywood blockbuster is about zombies, but it does have a clown zombie character appropriately named Clown Zombie played by actor Derek Graf.Killer Clown (2012) part of the Killjoy entries, this is the last installment in the series, but it's rather bland. The Houses October Built (2014) is about five friends who are stalked by a group of disturbed individuals while looking for a haunted house attraction.Clown Town (2016) is about a group of friends who are stranded in a small town. They end up being stalked by psychopaths dressed as clowns.Clowntergeist (2017) is about a college student who has to face a possessed clown who wants to kill her. Watch out clown ghosts!
